Hello,

Happy August!

A new season is upon us, and with that comes a new crop of interns. This month we welcomed 19 talented interns at the World Food Prize. We are excited and eager to have them join us!

This month's newsletter introduces you to our new Iowa Hunger Summit intern, Manichanh, highlights Summit breakout sessions and some upcoming events.

MEET MANICHANH

Manichanh Naonady is one of our new George Washington Carver Interns for Fall '19. In her position at the World Food Prize Foundation she will serve as the Iowa Hunger Summit Intern. Through this capacity she will act as the Breakout Session Liaison for the 2019 Iowa Hunger Summit and Borlaug Dialogue, and work to help promote this year's Summit.

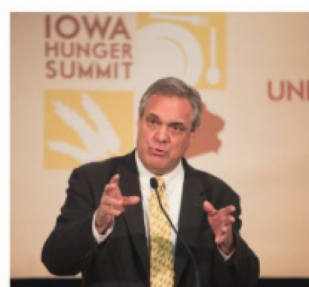

She is a senior at Iowa State University majoring in Journalism with a minor in Digital Media. Along with being a student, she has written numerous articles in relation to food sciences and events for a few of Iowa State's publications. She also brings with her over 10 years of work experience as an intern.

Manichanh's passion for writing comes from her passion for food. She believes that food is a shared culture that breaks the barriers of diversity and should be accessible to all, no matter their background. As a George Washington Carver Intern, she hopes to help bring more awareness to the scarcity of food, locally and globally.
